Dear Larry, With the disclosures since we first talked about the serial numbers on the D. Hunt C-notes, getting them is less important. It could still serve some value. However, the other items in the inventory can be important to me. There may be the undisclosed and I know I have interest in some of the partially-disclosed. One minor item that fascinates is a pin she was carrying or wearing, a piece of jewelry that had a name not her husband's. (Ifm not suggesting she was carrying on.)

If there is any chance you could get me a copy, I'd appreciate it. I hope it has descriptions of items, as of this pin.

There were more than two columns on Stone in yesterday's WxPost, largely on the Kup interview and one with a Trib man. Guess he doesn't like you. Sp, good luck with the hot little fingers!

I'm writing when there are no hearings. Busted lawnmowers let me make a bit of progress, less now that 1 1/2 are fixed. I've about 20-25,000 words done.

What is fun is writing some of it before it happens! I do it as note that may be kncorporated. Also gives me a check on the dependability of my analysis.

No deal, though. Silence from the German from whom I had the approach. No "no", except for the absence of a "yes."

Heard from John Ray yesterday. He is now at Marion.

Thanks if you can.

Best,
